Program Description

The Liberal Arts Associate of Arts (AA) degree offers students the opportunity to develop learning, thinking, and writing skills within a flexible degree designed to prepare them to successfully navigate upper-division work at a transfer institution and develop habits of mind for life-long learning. In addition to the general education program, students will take at least one Liberal Arts Research and Writing designated course that requires more in-depth study and the application of higher-order thinking skills such as analysis, synthesis, and creativity. Students will also complete at least two 200-level courses beyond the general education requirements to promote academic depth and rigor in preparation for advanced studies. The Liberal Arts AA degree culminates in a capstone project that offers students an opportunity to demonstrate their writing and research skills while reflecting on what they have learned and showcasing their accomplishments.
